Rent to Live Program

What is Rent to Live?

The Rent to Live Program, funded by the Department of Children and Families, provides supported transitional accommodation in the Greater Darwin region, alongside personalised tenancy and recovery support and the rental history needed to successfully move into long-term housing.

Support is delivered by experienced workers, with each participant working towards an individual exit strategy and the confidence to independently manage their own tenancy.

Support is provided for a duration suited to each participant's needs and goals, typically ranging from 6-12 months. Progress is regularly reviewed, with planned aftercare support available after moving on.

What We Offer

Rent to Live combines accommodation with practical, tenancy-focused support to give participants the best chance of securing and maintaining a home in the community.

- Transitional accommodation - Supported accommodation options across Greater Darwin, providing a safe and stable base during the program.
- Tenancy and recovery support - Culturally secure, structured support tailored to your pace and goals.
- Individual recovery and capacity building plans - personalised plans with regular goal review focused on long-term, stable housing outcomes.
- Warm referrals to services - Supported connections to health, employment, education and community services as needed.
- Up to 3 months aftercare - Support following your transition into long-term housing in the community.

Eligibility & Referrals

The program is open to individuals and families who:

- Are aged 18 years or over, or are a family
- Live in the Greater Darwin Region
- Are currently experiencing or at risk of homelessness
- Intend to transition into the long-term rental market
- Face barriers to obtaining or maintaining private rental housing due to social, personal or systemic factors

Referrals are accepted from all sources, including self-referral.
